

Racing Signals 2005-2008

A Guide for Race Officers

'Racing Signals 2005-08' is the second revision of Tony Lockett's original guide for Race Officers.

This book covers all the changes to the signals made in the RRS 2005-2008. The new features in this edition covers the signals used to switch on or off Rule 42 (the pumping flags) course configurations, competition formats and some of the lesser used signals which were omitted from the original publication. The formula of having a page devoted to each flag movement has been repeated, giving a logical sequence, which takes the Race Officer through all the signals required to run a successful race.

'Racing Signals' is now available direct from the author.

Racing Signals has been translated into Japanese, Hungarian, Spanish, German and French.

Racing Signals has also been put on to a CD. Powerpoint 97 is used to create an interactive presentation which can be used individually on a PC or can be projected using a data projector to a group as a training aid.

The main signal groups can be selected and dealt with individually, e.g. all the Abandon signals are displayed and removed with appropriate notes shown on the screen.

The full sequence of signals for a race can also be followed by clicking on the appropriate button on screen.

The CD complements the book and is priced at £10.
